Business attraction & support

Aerospace Task Force formed

In response to the 737 Max suspension, the Greater Wichita Partnership along with 14 other local, state and federal partners came together in January as the Aerospace Task Force. The Partnership supported the task force with coordination support, communications, marketing assistance and supplier outreach.

The task force coordinated a unified response to the needs of impacted workers and affected businesses, named the Air Capital Commitment. The Air Capital Commitment is a dedication that when things get tough, we rally together to provide the immediate support and long-term resources for our people, our companies and our community.

As part of the Air Capital Commitment, the Partnership developed and launched a one-stop website in January to provide information and connections to resources for workers affected by the production suspension and related layoffs.

The task force meets bi-weekly to address economic issues related to the pandemic, including to:

- Share information, including immediate needs and critical issues
- Work together to streamline efforts, identify barriers and find solutions
- Organize and initiate efforts for short-, mid- and long-term economic responses and recovery for individuals and businesses

The COVID-19 Community Task Force has provided support by securing and connecting PPE, testing, child care, economic recovery projects and more.

- The Partnership team partnered with eight organizations to create the Wichita Region Economic Recovery Report report communicates economic challenges due to the pandemic and a roadmap for recovery based on identified economic development projects, with a goal of spurring economic growth in the region.

- Alongside a coalition of regional partners, the Partnership submitted a letter for a local and significant Economic Development Administration grant and regional letters of support for two other potential federal opportunities.
