

COWLEY COUNTY

With concentrations such as workforce training, entrepreneurial growth and business development, it's no wonder why businesses are prospering in Cowley County, a semi-rural county that is adjacent to the Wichita metropolitan area. The county is known as a longtime leader in plastics manufacturing, aviation, and food processing with companies like GE Aviation, Ferguson Enterprises, and Creekstone Farms.

Cowley County is home to two higher education learning institutions: Cowley College and Southwestern College. Located in Arkansas City, Cowley College is a public two-year community college serving more than 3,000 students annually through a variety of degree and certificate programs. Southwestern College is a private four-year institution located in Winfield, offering more than 40 undergraduate majors and six graduate programs.

The healthy state of existing companies, as well as new entrants into the area, is visible with one visit to Cowley County.

A high concentration of plastic manufacturing with companies including Newell Rubbermaid, WestRock, and Western Industries Plastics Products Group, make Cowley County a logical place for the industry to grow.
